A House and Theater on “The Hill”<sup>1</sup>

A. Cleveland Harrison*

The year 1957-58 was extraordinary for my family and me. We spent it in a dilapidated house at 1538 Halsell Road in Fayetteville, as I pursued an advanced degree in theater at the University of Arkansas. That derelict house, long since vanished from the hillside, has never been forgotten by our family and me. For, in some inexplicable way, its primitive condition and its setting apparently nurtured certain accomplishments and joys for each of us, child and adult.

I held my first position as a college instructor at Little Rock Junior College, beginning in the fall of 1949. The school, nicknamed “Jaycee,” had recently moved from a neighborhood setting in the middle of town to a forested 87-acre site on Hayes Street, a little-used dirt road in the undeveloped southwest corner of the capital city. For six years (not including a year off for a second degree at Ohio State University) I taught oral and written English, speech, and dramatics at the college. I already held two degrees earned on the G. I. Bill—a bachelor’s in English, theater, and speech and master’s in communication—but my academic interests had narrowed to oral interpretation and theater, my natural, lifelong abilities, as I revived the theater program at Jaycee out of sheer love, without extra pay or *Dr. Harrison returned to teach at the University in the summer of 1959. As Assistant Professor of Speech and Dramatic Art, he supervised the Basic Speech Program from 1959 to 1963; as Associate Professor, he chaired the Basic Fine Arts Program from 1963 to 1967; as Professor, he was chairman of the department in 1969-1970, before becoming head professor of Theatre at Auburn University. While at Arkansas he directed thirty productions in the Fine Arts Theater and acted in others, including portrayals of Shakespeare’s Falstaff in Henry IV, Part I; Bottom the Weaver in Midsummer Night’s Dream; and Dogberry in Much Ado About Nothing.

Marian, Kathleen, and Lee Harrison contributed their own memories of the house on Halsell in 1957-58.

recognition from the administration. In my sixth year, the dean advised me of my eligibility for a paid sabbatical leave to do further academic study. But the drawback was the college's stipend of $1200; even by financial standards of the 1950s that token payment would not cover family expenses and tuition and books at a strong university.

Then, as so often occurred in my over forty years in academia, good fortune intervened. Mrs. Marguerite Metcalfe, the dynamic president of the Arkansas Speech Association and director of speech at Hall High School in Little Rock, asked me to chair the state speech festival in the spring of 1956, along with Miss Alberta Harris, my former speech and dramatics teacher at Little Rock High School. So, in March, Miss Harris and I greeted sponsors and students from Arkansas high schools and colleges, who competed in public speaking, debate, oral interpretation, and play production.<sup>2</sup> At an afternoon tea for faculty sponsors, Dr. Blair Hart, the tall, lanky chairman of Speech and Dramatic Art at the University of Arkansas, praised my direction of Jaycee's one-act play entry and my overall management of the festival. When he mentioned his need to replace two faculty members on leave in the coming year, both of whom would direct plays at the University Theater, I revealed how much I wanted more formal training in play direction and oral interpretation, but how LRJC's small stipend stymied that pursuit.

Dr. Hart complimented my handling of the festival and my play directing and offered a substantially larger stipend to add to LRJC's to direct plays while working on a master's degree at the University. My wife Tumpy, her real name is Marian, and I weighed the costs, mental and financial, of disrupting our family's routine, finding inexpensive quarters, storing household goods, moving personal belongings, and tending Kathleen, our seven-year-old daughter, and Lee, our three-year-old son, in a new and totally different environment for the kids and me. Tumpy knew and loved Fayetteville, having earned her own degree there during WW II.

While pondering what to do in early May of 1957, we visited Dr. and Mrs. John P. Anderson at their new home on 1611 Halsell Road. Our close family friends, since he was dean of students at LRJC before becoming chairman of the Department of Psychology at the University, they encouraged us to accept the offer. Elizabeth Anderson suggested renting a house opposite theirs on Halsell if the current occupants departed at the end of the term.

We telephoned Mrs. Ruth Gilbert, who also owned a rooming house on Maple Street at the north end of Arkansas Avenue and a business designing artificial silk orchids. The large, self-assured woman drove us west on Maple Street up the mountainside, turning left at the first intersection onto narrow Halsell Road, hemmed in by houses on lots higher and lower than the unpaved road's irregular surface. As we traced the road's curve going west, the houses were farther apart and trees and vegetation low enough to see the valley below. On the right hand side of the road were a house, wooded lot, and Mrs. Gilbert's property; beyond it, on the lower left side, were the homes of Professors Anderson (psychology), Kattan (agriculture), and Orton (mathematics), with Professor Guinn (English) across the road from the Ortons.

Mrs. Gilbert parked at the bottom of a driveway—two muddy ruts with a grassy ridge between—to protect her car's undercarriage. A small, dirty gray clapboard house, with windows to the left and right of the front door, stood at the crest of a sloping hill, surrounded by oaks on three sides. On the worn footpath to the shallow front porch, we walked past a bent, knotty pear tree buzzing with bees.

Stout Mrs. Gilbert breathlessly heaved herself up the front steps and inserted her house key in a loose, insecure lock, admitting us to the front half of the old house. The front room was furnished with a sofa under the windows, an old oak desk, a swivel oak chair on wheels with a pillow on the seat, a waste basket, and an ashtray on a stand. The adjoining room, through an open archway, had a fireplace framed by floor-to-ceiling windows and a tall stove in front of it. The only furnishings were a chest of drawers and a mattress and box springs on a double bed frame, without a head or foot board. The third room on the front of the house had two floor-to ceiling windows, a set of separated bunk beds, and a chest of drawers. The walls with any insulation were covered with tattered sheets of the Northwest Arkansas Times, peeling off the walls and penetrated, here and there, by dots of light from the outside.

The rear of the house was more primitive still, a tiny kitchen, with dirt-smearing white enamel wall cabinets filled with blackened, dented pots and pans, a small gas stove, electric refrigerator, and a scarred breakfast table with four chairs. Down a short hall, the tiny bathroom had walls covered by sheets of galvanized steel, enclosing a wash basin, a commode, and shower that emptied directly onto the ground under the house. The empty room at the hall's end, Mrs. Gilbert dignified as the "studio!" Its three greenhouse-like outside walls of stained glass panes, held in the mullions by flaking putty, held only a scarred upright piano on a dirt floor. But we were temporary vagabonds, unable to afford the available apartments and without sufficient time or money for a second trip to Fayetteville, so Tumpy and I settled for the house at 1538 Halsell Road, “until something better comes along.” With optimism and loving friends close by, we rented the quaint farm house, aping the starving artists who endured garret rooms.

In late May, we departed Little Rock in our red Ford station wagon, its rear piled with clothes and gear for our family in the coming year. We hit the ground running in Fayetteville. Tumpy organizing and cleaning the house on Halsell as I enrolled, for the summer term, in two courses, Theater Workshop and British and American Public Address. At the Fine Arts Theater, I met Harold Tedford—a tall, lean, down-to-earth theater graduate, with a recent masters’ degree—the designer-technical director for the Workshop’s two summer productions. Then I visited Professor Preston Magruder, who had not yet departed to study for a year at Denver University. His stunning natural-stone contemporary house on Razorback Road, across from the stadium, designed by Professor Cyrus Sutherland of the Architecture Department, was a large open space on several levels, the central one at ground level, surrounded by built-in benches facing a huge fireplace. The kitchen, bedroom, and bathroom on slightly higher levels, overlooked the central living room, and the interior walls were so ingeniously arranged that there was no door to the bathroom. Professor Magruder, as the theater’s technical director and scene designer, outlined my job to design play programs and advertisements at the theater for the summer and coming year.

My academic course, taught by Professor Ralph T. Eubanks, introduced me to the works of Charles James Fox and Edmund Burke and other speakers of eighteenth-century England and America. Tall and Lincoln-esque, the native Arkansawyer from Mulberry had recently completed his Ph.D. at the University of Florida. Scholarly in thought and manner, Professor Eubanks expected students to share his intense devotion to the subject, achieving his aim with me but less successfully with younger students in our small seminar. We took copious notes at lectures, scaled mountains of ancient tomes in the library, and wrote lengthy footnoted essays on orators and themes.

Theater Workshop required a different kind of collaboration with Professors Norman DeMarco and George Kernodle, two men as contrasting as salt and pepper. Mr. DeMarco directed Rackinsack,<sup>3</sup> the world premier of Professor Robert Morris’s two-act mountain play, the highlight of the Arkansas Folklore Association’s ninth annual folk festival. When we gathered for auditions, I was impressed again by the quiet, brown interior of the theater with the decorative canvas sculptures on the side walls, three hundred seats, orchestra pit, and the stage floor higher than the audience's heads. Also, to have a green room, men's and women's dressing rooms, scene shop, light and sound booths, after no such accommodations at Little Rock, seemed a dream. After Jaycee's jerry-built Quadrangle Theater—150 seats in-the-round on homemade risers in the library basement—the Fine Arts Theater was a move to a penthouse from a tenement.

Mr. DeMarco, slender and average in height, had sparse black hair, wore knitted shirts and soft shoes, and hitched his trousers high on his waist. He worked on stage beside the actors with a cigarette drooping at the corner of his mouth. Like most college directors, he had to cast students whose bodies and faces appeared old enough to represent mature characters believably, so he chose graduate students for most of the principal roles, with me (at thirty-three) playing Jim Bell, a superstitious middle-aged mountain man, and Harold Tedford's spouse, Jo Anne (in her twenties but full-figured), as his wife, Lutie Bell. An unusual feature of auditions and rehearsals was the presence of the playwright, Dr. Morris, whom Mr. DeMarco would probably have been more comfortable without. That may be why he directed on stage beside actors, informing and coaching them in quiet conversation. If an actor gave what he wanted in early readings, Mr. DeMarco seldom added comments or instructions.

Rackinsack's plot escapes me after fifty years, but it was a memory play, told by Old Lafayette Barky, about the way of life in a small settlement on a Southern mountain when President McKinley was in office. "The Observer" of the Northwest Arkansas Times praised our performance:

The star of the show quite definitely was Cleveland Harrison, who played the part of Jim Bell, but others in the cast of about 20 persons carried out their roles with finesse and all added to the smoothness of the performance. Harrison had exactly the right accent, gave the correct appearance of fright at the supernatural, and generally carried the assignment of his part with aplomb.<sup>4</sup>

While I worked on campus and on stage, my wife, daughter, and son discovered the deficiencies and pleasures of our quarters and neighborhood, especially their fellowship with dear Elizabeth Anderson and her children: John, Stoney, and Dove. Tumpy and the kids made new friends with Ann Kattan and her little daughter and son, Jeanie and Mitch, and Marion Orton and her small daughter and son, Lori and Billy.

For our children, the property furnished, up close, light, space, and objects of the natural world. The place on Halsell Road was a playhouse and a playground, where they spent sunny days outdoors on the porch and in the yard, exploring the "wilds" of the hillside. At the back of the house, one huge oak tree had a low-lying branch that the kids, especially Lee, bounced up and down on, a bucking not a rocking horse. Since the children had neither seen nor played with striped green garter snakes and snapping turtles, they approached them intimidated but thrilled. Thrusting a stick near a turtle's mouth to spur him to snap, without endangering their own small appendages, they were held in gleeful suspense. But just to be sure no one was injured, I later killed the garter snake with a sling blade by chopping it into pieces that jumped around on the walk in front of the porch as the kids hopped around and giggled. And I aggravated a big snapping turtle, which stalled at the side of the front porch steps, until it grabbed the end of the stick, and I could carry and throw him into the woods.

A HOUSE AND THEATER ON "THE HILL"

On rainy days, which were frequent that first summer, the kids stood beside the windows in the "studio" watching squirrels, rabbits, and birds gamboling, hopping, flying, and feeding on the ground between the house and woods. In the "studio," since neither of our children could play the piano, our son pounded the black and not-so-white keys in a none-too-gentle rhythm, making flat, tinny chords that lingered without damping in the small room. Lee also loved to sit and twirl in my swivel desk chair, but one morning he swiveled while drinking a glass of water, and the chair tipped over. His crash, like a pistol shot, roused everyone, and we raced to the front room, to find Lee sitting on the floor, holding the glass of water without having spilled a drop.

The Andersons embraced us as part of their family, Elizabeth sharing part of each day with Tumpy over coffee and inviting us all for meals and television watching on weekends when I had no rehearsals. Dr. John tended his rose garden assiduously in the backyard after work, with or without us visiting, coming to supper as the sun faded. John, their tall, redheaded older son, enjoyed doing a goofy hick manner and voice for his own, if no one else's, pleasure, much to his mother's disgust. Stoney, short for "Stonewall," rarely ate with the family, for he jumped from practicing one sport to another as football, baseball, track, and tennis seasons came and went. And Dove, their tall, blonde, young daughter, coped with her older brothers and the vicissitudes of being larger than her classmates.

My work at the theater demanded most hours of every day, including evenings and weekends. Before Rackinsack's brief run closed, Dr. Kernodle held auditions for two short comedies, Moliere's The Doctor in Spite of Himself, and George Kelly's The Flattering Word, to be presented July 8 and 9.<sup>5</sup> Dr. K, a gleeful little man, his head sprouting a thick thatch of wavy gray hair, directed in a high pitched voice, clearing his throat regularly, standing by the first rows at the front of the stage. In bright colored shirts and socks, his slacks pulled high at the waist, he pranced in soft-soled espadrilles up the stage steps to demonstrate what an actor did not understand about a traditional farce technique, physical or vocal. With script in hand, a constant smile on his face, he improvised, for he wrote no directions on the pages of his prompt book.

I stage managed both Kernodle shows, and designed the set for and played the role of Reverend Loring Rigley in The Flattering Word. A noted thespian on a cross-country tour, dropping into the home of an old schoolmate who is married to a minister, a pillar of his community, prig, and opponent of the theatre. When the Reverend refuses to meet the actor but his wife prevails. The dashing actor arrives and turns the household upside down by wooing the reverend's assistant, then the reverend himself, with "the flattering word," but finally gets paid back by the assistant's shrill young daughter reciting impromptu Tennyson's "Ring Out Wild Bells." The Northwest Arkansas Times reviewer thought me "convincing as a gentleman of the cloth," in The Flattering Word, the first of Dr. Kernodle's two short comedies that closed the summer season in early July.<sup>6</sup>

Assuming my time was all my own, I set out to design the upcoming season's brochure, research and write a final essay for British and American Public Address, and spend time with my family. But Moliere's plays intrigued me, particularly the comic techniques inherent in his scripts; so with Dr. K's advice and encouragement, I bought a Modern Library collection of eight Moliere plays, translated by Morris Bishop,<sup>7</sup> planning to read and analyze them all.

But before I embarked on the plays, Dr. Morris asked me to direct a production at the Central Methodist Church on Dickson Street. Mrs. Robert E. L. Bearden, the pastor's wife, had written a history of the church, entitled The Everlasting Song, which was already scheduled and cast with actors.

A HOUSE AND THEATER ON "THE HILL"

The script was primarily a dialogue about the establishment and progress of the Fayetteville church by stock characters, played by Carolyn Sager and Walt Bosshart, theater majors at the university, and Charles Hathcock, a senior in theater at Baylor University in Texas. Hathcock was the central character, a circuit-riding preacher. John Wesley's plan for the spread of Methodism was based on multiple meeting places for congregations, called circuits, which required itinerant preachers to visit each church in his charge at least once a year and usually more. Charles arrived one day before the single performance to learn the positions and movement worked out by me with the other actors in the church sanctuary. Fortunately, Charles had memorized his dialogue and he assimilated the blocking quickly. The history dialogue was in the church's sanctuary on the night of July 14, 1957.

Back at studying Moliere's plays again, I sat at my desk, intermittently, ensconced at my trusty portable Remington typewriter, converting Bishop's prose translation of Les Precieuses ridicules into poetry, ending lines in rhymed couplets throughout. I typed the script on a supply of stationery with the letterhead of a defunct Arkansas insurance company that a previous renter left. Literary Discoveries, Inc. of San Francisco, published my adaptation, titled The Ladies of Fashion, in 1963. In the satiric comedy, Fumeyfuss, the guardian of his daughter and a niece who make fools of themselves choosing their beaux in the fashion of the day, ends the play by observing:

The moral of this play is clear.

The payment fashion asks is dear.

The worth of what you think you see

Is hardly what it seems to be.

While I was writing a paper about Edmund Burke's speech to Parliament, Conciliation with America (1775), Dr. Hart informed me that summer graduate student, Jack Peyrouse, would earn seminar credit directing a play at the Fine Arts Theater; and that since Harold Tedford, who designed the earlier productions, had left school, I was by default technical director for The Reluctant Debutante, a two-act drawing room comedy, by William Douglas Home.<sup>8</sup>

An upper class couple, Jimmy and Sheila Broadbent, take their 17-year-old daughter, Jane, to London to make her debut—an idea Jane loathes. Jane's reluctance to mount the marriage block, her Cousin Mabel's efforts to sabotage Sheila's efforts, her unsupportive husband's desire to get his sleep, and the young man Sheila doesn't want Jane to be with turning out to be the one she is interested in produce much of the comedy.

By coincidence, Jack Peyrouse, the director, was married to Sara Harton, Elizabeth Anderson's niece, which didn't change my view of Jack as a bombastic director. He wanted to produce the play with a full set, proscenium style. But with my past experience producing and directing, I was sure it couldn't be accomplished in the time allowed, and proposed an in-the-round production, utilizing the University Theater's special platforms and seating for an arena on stage. Since many actors in the earlier plays left at the end of the first term, I was asked to play the role of David Bullock, a goofy young suitor seeking the debutante's hand.

The production opened August 15th in the midst of a thunderstorm, providing an opportunity to study weather's affect on audience response, a topic that had interested me ever since reading an essay in Theatre Arts Magazine several years before. As I left the house on Halsell for the theater, dark gray clouds were stacked on top of black ones in the western sky, and darts of white lightning flashed beneath them. I drove down the mountain to the theater accompanied by long, low rumbles of thunder but no rain.

As our cast and crew completed their preparations, the opening night crowd filled the canvas seats on the aluminum-and-wood risers in a subdued manner. When stage lights came up and action of the play began, filled with frothy light comedy repartee, there were few laughs, only a titter or two. Offstage, the experienced actors reminded younger players not to try to force the audience to laugh but to relax and seek their characters' immediate desires. But the cast did work hard projecting vocally to be heard over lightning and rolling thunder, and the wind and rain humming in roof ventilators over the stage. The act ended to polite applause, and patrons filed off stage to auditorium aisles to the gallery, conversing quietly. The storm's climax came at the intermission but rain continued. Offstage, the cast agreed to play the final act as quickly and quietly as possible, and bid farewell to an unyielding audience which found neither players nor play script funny. But as the lights came up again on stage, before an actor even spoke, audience members chuckled, and the dialogue and mime that followed stirred snickers, titters, and guffaws. I was holding out a cocktail in a toast and rain drops from an overhead ventilator fell into my glass, splashing on the heroine and me. The audience roared. I pulled the glass back, looked into it, and then up. The audience exploded. Sudden movements on stage often get that response.

A HOUSE AND THEATER ON "THE HILL"

But the players and audience had slipped into a groove, their emotions feeding off each other. We were experiencing the result of a major rise in the barometric pressure. The low barometer before the storm built tensions in players and audience members without providing any release, but when the storm broke and the barometric pressure rose, the audience's tension was released and they were susceptible to laughter.

Dr. Morris, writing in the Northwest Arkansas Times, observed, "Cleveland Harrison has an excellent comic past [sic] as the efft [sic] young gentleman."<sup>9</sup> He referred to my "effete part" as a nearsighted toff, wearing round, dark-rimmed glasses and speaking in a fruity upper-class English dialect.

In August, after a short trip to Little Rock to visit my parents, we returned and met Byrne Blackwood, Preston Magruder's replacement, who had an athletic physique, unruly black hair, and laid-back personality. Byrne, a scene designer, and his wife, Margaret, a musician, were both former students at UA, taking a break from Byrne's doctoral studies at Northwestern University. After designing all my sets for six years, it was inspiring to collaborate with designer on Lynn Riggs' Green Grow the Lilacs, the folk drama in six scenes, upon which Rogers and Hammerstein based their musical comedy, Oklahoma.

Byrne and I agreed on a stage design of fragmentary set pieces—a farmhouse, smokehouse, barn, and hayfield—in front of a stage-wide sky cyclorama, representing the sunlit expanse of Oklahoma plains and speeding scene changes. Mary Davis, Arkansas's longtime costumer, back from her position as wardrobe assistant at The Lost Colony in North Carolina, designed and built costumes for the show. Portia Kernodle, who agreed to play Aunt Eller, introduced me to Professor Catherine McHugh of the music department who helped find suitable songs for Curly to sing and music for the barn dance: "Get Along Little Doggie," "A-Ridin' Old Paint and A-Leadin' Old Dan," "One morning as I rambled o'er," and "Skip to My Lou." In our search, I learned that Mexicans called Americans "Gringos" after hearing U.S. soldiers slurring words while singing "Green Grow the Lilacs" doing duty on the border. Portia also introduced me to Martha Sutherland, the artist and wife of architecture Professor Cyrus Sutherland, who managed the theater box office, selling tickets for each play from the moveable box office wagon in the fine arts gallery.

A HOUSE AND THEATER ON “THE HILL”

At auditions, I discovered a contingent of former students from the Trojan Theater Guild at Jaycee were at the University, including David Shaw and Jay Stanley, the publicity director and sound director at Little Rock, were the editor and business manager of the 1956-57 Razorback Yearbook. Bill Downs, the lead in Jaycee’s John Loves Mary, was the author-director of the varsity show, Gaebale, for 1957. Three young women from Jaycee productions—Carolyn Ferguson, Lana Douthit, and Kenda Harris—joined the production crew and cast in Green Grow the Lilacs. Jim Wallace, a strong theater student at Jaycee, after two years in the Army in Europe, was at the University, and his rugged good looks and beautiful baritone singing voice were just right for the tall, raw-boned curly McClain. Lowell Fenner, from Arkansas State at Jonesboro, had muscularity and heavy-browed threat in the role of Jeeter Fry, and Claudette Shock, an undergraduate, had the simple manner and warmth needed for the heroine, Laurey. Portia Kernodle, as Aunt Eller, and Art Professor Ed Albin, as Old Man Peck, added their professional talents and splendid characterizations to the production. Portia, a lifelong friend of our family, invited us countless times to The Ark, the Kernodle home on Rebecca Street.

Directing Green Grow the Lilacs demanded growth and self-discovery on my part. I had principally directed arena productions until then and had to master the techniques of proscenium staging. From small casts on single-sets in one place, over narrow time spans, I had to learn to direct a cast of dozens on multiple sets in different places, over a span of time. I leaned upon and learned from Alexander Dean’s text, Fundamentals of Play Directing,<sup>10</sup> which I had studied in an undergraduate directing class at Ohio State but had never practiced. With every page of script studied and every rehearsal conducted I had epiphanies, as if I were born to direct plays.

Focusing on summer classes and performances while preparing to direct the biggest, most demanding play of my life, I didn’t notice that balmy summer had turned to russet fall until the kids told about gazing down the valley in the evening at the colored lights of the carnival rides, moving up and down and around in circles at the Washington County Fair, and, after rehearsals, hearing the faint fragments of music carried on the wind up the valley. The crucial clue to the season was Tumpy’s enrolling Kathleen in Mrs. Arlie Bogg’s second-grade class at Leverett Elementary School, on the other side of the mountain from our ramshackle home.

FLASHBACK

Delivering her to school before taking me to the campus, Tumpy drove a direct route, east on Halsell across Maple Street which became Oliver Street and intersected Lafayette Avenue which Leverett faced. On our way to the theater, I saw the emerald green mansions of oaks surrounding our little house turning to burnished gold; and on Sunday drives, the multicolored mosaics of garnet maples, topaz hickory, and coral sassafras trees; and the orange and red of sweet gums and sugar maples.

On our explorations of the countryside, along the strips of blacktop in the spider web of roads connecting Fayetteville, Siloam Springs, Farmington, Prairie Grove, and Tontitown, we passed streams, their banks covered with sycamore, witch hazel, and elm trees, a review of my Boy Scout forestry merit badge. On one narrow strip, we forded a shallow, sparkling stream filled with beds of green water cress on both sides of the road. Climbing the hillsides, we saw that the ravenous green vines of kudzu in the spring and summer, covered in tiny purple flowers smelling like GrapeAde, but in the fall hung like slack gray locks over the branches of the trees. The children, as winter approached, called withered gray vines on naked trees "witches' hair."

A HOUSE AND THEATER ON "THE HILL"

On campus, I loved preparing and rehearsing Green Grow the Lilacs, conceiving production details with scene, costume, and lighting designers and the choreographer; working with a cast of twenty-five actors; having five different locales and sets; guiding a production staff of twenty-three. Both the campus and town newspapers sent critics to the performances. Unfortunately, The Traveler reviewer enjoyed his own sarcastic ripostes more than the playwright's script or my production of it, finding "It was all just wonderfully quaint."<sup>11</sup> His chief complaint was Lynn Rigg's dependence on Freudian psychology in developing characters. However, one Fayetteville playgoer, Roy M. Peterson, defended the production in the Northwest Arkansas Times, "I've seen plays in many of the big cities of the country, with polished, seasoned players, and some of ours could give them lessons."

As did Dr. Morris in his review for The Times:

If bare bones of the melodrama show through... and if there is some Freudian characterization...these are small objections in a production that is ably directed and beautifully mounted.<sup>12</sup>

Once Rodgers and Hammerstein adapted Green Grow in the musical Oklahoma, revivals of the play could hardly match their triumph.

By the fall of 1957, after working four months with Mr. A. W. Blake, the manager of the Print Shop in the basement of Hill Hall, preparing programs and placards for three shows, I learned to meet his rigid deadlines. Tending only advertising and program copy for the next play, Philip Barry's Hotel Universe, directed by Robert Johnson, Mr. DeMarco's replacement, I was eager to complete assignments in my two academic courses, a paper on the conventions of Greek theater for Dr. Kernodle's History of Theater course and direct and act in the New Play Series for The Production of New Plays, a course taught by Professor Virgil Baker, former head of Speech and Dramatic Art. In reading-in-action performances, actors carried dialogue on half pages and had minimum scenery, furnishings, and properties. As Merlub Sukor, an old Jewish father in House in a Sea, I acted in a new play by Philip Gelb, on November 26, in the Studio Theater (Room 212B in Old Main).

Assistant Professor Ralph W. Widener, Jr., faculty sponsor of the University's chapter of Tau Kappa Alpha, the national honorary forensic society, asked me to read a literary work for their debate tournament banquet on November 15. For the occasion, I chose "Mr. Kaplan's Dark Logic," from *The Education of H*Y*M*E*N K*A*P*L*A*N*, by Leo Rosten,<sup>13</sup> an hilarious look at teaching and learning the English language. The book conveys the frustrations, contradictions and misnomers of English through the eyes of an enthusiastic immigrant student, with a thick Middle-European accent, who contrives to learn without making progress and renders his long-suffering teacher, Mr. Parkhill, speechless. In Yiddish dialect, I presented Kaplan's numerous interjections and enthusiastic suggestions that turned an ordinary evening class into a study of consistent misunderstanding and malapropism. Hymen's charm is his incorrect answers have an essential truth behind them.

The hearty laughter throughout my reading and explosive applause at the end surprised me; I hadn't expected such an overwhelming response. At evening's end, Dr. Hart introduced me to the University president, Dr. John Tyler Caldwell, as on leave from LRJC seeking a master's degree. The president vigorously shook my hand and turned to Dr. Hart, "Now, this young man has the kind of professional talent your speech and theater students should be exposed to." To which Dr. Hart replied, "I wish we had an open academic position for him to fill."

Dr. Kernodle held auditions for School for Scandal prior to the Hotel Universe performances, November 12 through 16. I assumed he expected me to try out for Sir Peter Teazle, the oldest principal character in the play, but he cast me as Sir Joseph Surface, a sophisticated hypocrite. Set in 1777 London, Sheridan's play takes a journey through London society of the time.

Sir Peter Teazle has taken a young wife which is enough to start the scandalmongers talking, but the rumor that Sir Peter's wife is involved with handsome young Joseph Surface sets the gossips off and running. Acting as social barometers of London, Lady Sneerwell, Mrs. Candour, Crabtree and Sir Benjamin Backbite hiss and spit their way in the play, taking aim and hitting unsuspecting targets every time. Lady Teazle, not feeling appreciated by her husband, arranges a liaison with the hypocritical cad Joseph Surface, only to have it foiled by her husband. Meanwhile, Sir Oliver Surface returns to England a wealthy man, looking for someone to name as his heir, and decides to test Joseph and his brother, Charles Surface, to see which is worthy of receiving his fortune.

Since I had never acted eighteenth-century dramatic conventions before, I encountered another theater frontier, and Dr. Kernodle, an international theater historian, was an ideal guide.<sup>14</sup> Byrne's set, inspired by theatrical conventions of the period, was a false proscenium inside the theater's proscenium, with several drops changing to different locales merely by lifting one and dropping another. My behavior and first line set the comedy key and audience's response to our performance. When a servant showed me, Sir Joseph Surface, into the chief gossip's chamber, I pranced onstage clad in white wig, narrow skirted coat, waistcoat with lapels, and knee breeches over stockings. My toes pointing outwards, I bent slightly at the waist keeping my head up, drew my right leg back and pressed my left hand across my abdomen, extending my right hand and a lace handkerchief away from my body, saying, "My dear Lady Sneerwell, how do you do today—your most obedient." A man in the audience exclaimed, "Oh, my god!" It was gasp-and-laugh time throughout the remainder of the performance.

Dr. Morris, reviewing for the Northwest Arkansas Times, approved the whole performance: "Especially to be applauded was the decision to stage the work in the 18th century style, thus retaining its charm as a museum piece.” And again, he singled out my work, observing: “Cleveland Harrison leads the cast as the comic artist of the performance for both his mastery of facial expression and pantomime.”<sup>15</sup>

The Traveler reviewer, who had condemned Green Grow the Lilacs, was also enthusiastic about our cast and performances:

Only rarely does a University production present a cast with professional smoothness, and only rarely is it evident that there are no miscasts. But last night’s production was one of those rarities . . . Most of the accolades must be heaped upon the talented shoulders of Jim Wallace as Sir Peter Teazle and Cleveland Harrison as Joseph Surface. Those two captivated the audience with their witty interpretations and received collective chuckles by merely prancing on the stage in their perfect characterizations.<sup>16</sup>

A HOUSE AND THEATER ON "THE HILL"

Ironically, Larry C. Williams, the critic and student of mine at LRJC, who lambasted Green Grow the Lilacs, wrote this complimentary review.

I had a bad cold the final night of the play's run and was happy to be closing, particularly since Tumpy and I were taking the children to spend Christmas in Houston with her parents. Besides, I needed time to prepare the director's script for The Chalk Garden, my next assignment, beginning after the holidays when I would also direct Magda, by Tom Shaw, a short reading-in-action play in the Studio Theater on January 9, 1958. My work in the summer and fall terms earned membership in the University of Arkansas chapter of the National Collegiate Players.

We drove to Little Rock, left our car with my parents, and boarded the Missouri Pacific's Sunshine Special to Houston, an overnight trip that introduced our children to the thrills and misery traveling in a chair car on a train. We wouldn't realize how bad our choice was until the return trip.

For privacy and comfort, we preferred to sit at one end of a chair car with seats facing each other, but both ends on both sides of the aisle were occupied. On our return trip, two persons in the four seats at one end were covered from head to foot by a blanket. We took the next set of two seats facing each other, and soon heard a man coughing under the covers. He never left his seat, lying concealed the entire way, being tended by a companion. Back in Little Rock, I ached and had a temperature but insisted on driving to Fayetteville to distract myself. No one else in our family caught the Asiatic flu which had stalked the campus since October, but as influenza cases lessened on campus they spread across the city.

Fortunately, while we were away, Mrs. Gilbert had the interior walls of the three front rooms covered with pink insulation board while we were away. I stayed in bed in the slightly less breezy, warmer house, emerging only long enough to stage manage Contemporary Works featuring dance, orchestra, and chorus, on January 10 and 11, 1958: Energico, by Robert Palmer, Rhapsodic Suite, by Alan Hovhaness, and The Unicorn, the Gorgon, and the Manticore, by Gian-Carlo Menotti. Miss Eleanor King choreographed the dances, Marx Pales conducted the orchestra, and Richard Brothers conducted the Schola Cantorum.

Byrne and his crew struck the sets the last night of the show to arrange the stage for The Chalk Garden, to be done arena style to save production costs, provide variety, and use my experience directing in the round. The Chalk Garden, produced in London in 1954, stretched all the actors and me.

Miss Madrigal, the secretive new governess was aware that a problem child's atrocious behavior stemmed from believing her oft-married mother did not love her. So Madrigal determined to straighten out Laurel before she became unmanageable and hurt someone. Madrigal had been released from prison after being charged with murdering her stepsister and knew what she was doing. Laurel's wealthy grandmother, pulled away from her precious garden only when she think a murderess is in her house, is thrilled by the prospect.

After spending the summer and fall at the University, I had seen performances by many student actors, and could cast the more mature roles with more assurance. Designing the set and blocking the action were a breeze after producing for six years in the round. Nita Harington, who was a deep, quiet young woman, was totally believable as Madrigal, even with limited stage experience. A young music major, Maureen Vincent, had the requisite beauty and voice but hardly the spitfire personality required of Laurel. Dr. Morris suggested in the Times:

All of the cast, inexperienced with this brand of humor, do what they can to express the author's intentions. . . . The decision here was to produce the play in-the-round—a decision that is bound to be debated by all who see it.”<sup>17</sup> While an anonymous Traveler reviewer concluded: “The Chalk Garden is witty, moves with a fast pace, is presented with taste and vigor in the round style, and on the whole comes off quite well.”<sup>18</sup>

Relieved to have completed my directing assignment so early in the spring term, I turned back to adapting Moliere's play, and also joined members of Dr. Hart's advanced oral interpretation class presenting programs before various groups at different venues in Springdale and Fayetteville. Our program, titled “A Medley of Literary Moods,” consisted of works by William Saroyan, Paul Lawrence Dunbar, Ralph Hodgson, Carl Sandburg, James Stephens, and Dorothy Parker. The other readers in our group were Betty Ervin, Winifred Ralston, and John Gray. Meanwhile, I was also reading from a stack of seventy original plays submitted from all over the United States to Professor Virgil Baker's Third Annual Playwriting Contest. The judges—Dr. Robert Morris, Mimi Marr, Larry Randolph, and I chose Night of the Elf, by Jimmy D. Baines, as first prize winner for 1957.

A HOUSE AND THEATER ON "THE HILL"

In the meantime, Mrs. Mary Ingalls and Mrs. Opal Hart, speech and English teachers at Fayetteville Senior High School, drafted me for featured speaker for the school's first annual Junior-Senior Banquet, on May 28, 1958, and I spoke on the humorous topic "Growing Down in America," a disquisition on children adopting adult clothes, habits, and manners before reaching the appropriate ages. Meantime, Dr. Hart asked me to join the faculty for the Summer Stock Productions, and I chose to direct My Three Angels, to be presented June 12–13, 1958. Norman DeMarco would direct Outward Bound (June 26–27) and George Kernodle produced Night of the Elf (July 8–9), the winner of the New Plays Award for 1957.

With my second master's degree in hand, no summer courses to take, and one play to direct, I had time at home with our family on Halsell Road. The first signs of spring on our hillside were not buds or green leaves but chilly white blossoms on the leafless boughs of the pear tree in the front yard; its upright boughs filling with snowy blossoms until pendulous and covered by dozy humming bees. Our family sat on the front porch in early spring, watching rain showers sweeping up the mountainside from the valley, like dark gray veils. To catch the rain for play-like tea parties, the kids collected plastic dishes and other containers and placed them in the yard. When summer heat finally embraced Fayetteville, despite its mountain setting, Kathleen and Lee frolicked in the rain in their swim suits or underwear and traipsed back inside the house, smelling of rain. At night, they slept happily in their bunks as breezes flowed through the floor-to-ceiling windows from the valley below, wafting the perfume of the woods. They told us at breakfast about "small animals" (that's what they called them) that visited outside the front windows in the early morning hours. When honeysuckle bloomed, filling the side yard with a delicious aroma, they picked the delicate blossoms and consumed their nectar.

Lee was the most adventurous spirit in the family, oblivious of potential dangers. If he saw the cover of the gas meter dislodged or off, he hid in the hole among the spiders; and his mother, informed by his sister, would really be peeved finding him in the hole, unbitten but web-smeared. Yet the boy seemed attracted to enclosed spaces, for he crawled on the ground, hiding in small tunnels in the tall dead grass in the lot beside the Anderson home, where he remained even when his mother called him home. To our good fortune, Elizabeth and Dove saw him crawling in the grass and gave him away. Lee also wandered into the woods behind our house, wandering without paying attention to where he was going or whether he could find his way back. One day he wandered so far near sundown that he came to Maple Street in the dim golden light, believing he had “discovered a secret path to a golden world,” but never told his mother how far he went and what he found.

But one adventure attracted every kid within shouting distance of our Halsell house. Beyond the Orton’s, a donkey named Lightning was in a fenced lot. The children had fun feeding apples to the donkey, a loving animal that appeared huge and terrifying to the small fry. Occasionally, Lightning escaped his pen, frightening the children into “running for the lives.” On one occasion, Lee and Mitch ran to the Kattan’s and climbed up on Mitch’s swing for safety, only to have Lightning come and stand level with their faces, staring, waiting to be fed an apple. Screaming and pleading for help, they waited until an available mother produced an apple and “saved them.”

The kids were in contact with two kinds of dogs, a gentle, rather goofy pair of cocker spaniels, owned by the Andersons, and a large Labrador retriever, owned by the Kattans—a colorful set of dogs: red Rocky, blonde Rippy, and pitch black Sambo. The spaniels spent a lot of time inside the Anderson house and outside under the shade of the carport. Sambo was content in the Kattan’s yard until the children were outside playing. Outgoing and eager to please, he tended to pursue the kids, bound up on them, and, if they ran, to chase them, sometimes so diligently he frightened them. One day, Sambo pounced, knocking Lee to the ground; and Lee started running, with Sambo pursuing him as if part of a game. Kathleen and Lee ran into our yard and up the front steps, hollering for their mother. Tumpy rushed to the front door, assuming someone threatened our children. She saw Sambo turn over our garbage can, scattering the contents across the yard, and grabbed a broom, the nearest weapon, to run out screaming like a banshee chasing Sambo, his thick tail tucked between its legs, to the Kattan’s yard. I wish I had seen my quiet, gentle Tumpy protecting our children like a holy terror.

Rehearsals for My Three Angels—a play was about three convicts who become good angels helping a badly harassed household—pulled me away from the magic circle of the neighborhood. The scene is Cayenne, French Guiana, in 1910, where the temperature drops to 104 degrees on Christmas Day and convicts can not only hire out but apparently never have to report back. The three angels are employed as roofers by a family in danger of having no roof over their heads, for on the way from France is a snarling cousin preparing to oust Papa from the business he has botched.

Coming along with the cousin is his cold-blooded nephew, who is jilting Papa's daughter for an heiress. The angels—two murderers and a swindler—all of whom have sunny natures, warm hearts, clever hands, sleepless brains, and believe in the robin hood of man. Possessing every criminal art and penal grace, they take on the visiting villains and set matters right in a Gallic Christmas Carol where it is simpler to bump Scrooge off than convert him.

For Byrne, Lowell, and me—three older married men—the production was a celebration of a year's work together. Byrne, who designed, built, and lighted the sets for every production, was heading to a position at Stetson University in DeLand, Florida, and I was returning to Little Rock Junior College to fulfill a contractual obligation to teach at Jaycee for one year following my sabbatical. Byrne did the set for Angels and played the role of Alfred, the young romantic convict. Lowell Fenner, who was Jeeter Fry in Green Grow the Lilacs and the male lead in Hotel Universe, played Jules, the cynical, threatening convict, and I was Joseph, a wily old embezzler. Nita Harington, the central character Madrigal in The Chalk Garden, was Emilie, the store owner's wife. Exhausting the available men in the several roles, we had to find someone to play a young French navy lieutenant who rescues the ingenue from single life. Nita convinced her husband, Don, a student in the Art Department, who played small roles in Rackinsack and Green Grow the Lilacs, and painted imaginative signs beside the box office, to play the walk-on role. I approved her choice, for he was tall, dark, and handsome in a white naval uniform.<sup>19</sup>

As a junior-college instructor, I did not imagine a one-year sabbatical as a graduate student at the University of Arkansas would be so productive, filled with academic and artistic challenges from beginning to end, in acting, directing, writing, oral reading, and speaking. In one year, I had directed three long and two short plays, acted three major roles, presented three oral interpretation programs, stage managed three shows, served twice as a banquet speaker, judged play scripts in a national playwriting contest, and designed one set, while completing thirty semester hours of academic courses with "A's" in 1957-58.

As my sabbatical ended, and our family prepared to leave for Little Rock, Dr. Hart stopped by the house on the hill, parking at the foot of the driveway to avoid the ridge between the ruts, and informed me that he was seeking another teaching position in the Department of Speech and Dramatic Art, but he would need administrative approval before offering it to me. Wedged in the red station wagon, among our now well-worn belongings, we headed home on old U.S. Highway 71, the only road down the mountains between Fayetteville and Alma. The serpentine descent on switch backs and hair pin curves was almost as exhilarating as the happy prospect of returning to an institution and town we had come to love while living in the magic house on Halsell Road.

Slaves and Free Men of Color of Washington County, Arkansas, 1829-1865

Compiled by
Anthony J. Wappel
with Judy Drummond and Angela Holcomb*

While indexing the numerous records housed in the Archives of Washington County, the Archives Staff (consisting of Tony Wappel, Judy Drummond and Angela Holcomb) realized that numerous documents included information about slaves. We decided to note these entries as a way to record information about slaves in our county. Although we did our best to be thorough, there is no guarantee that we noticed every single slave entry, as that was usually of secondary import to the actual types of records being indexed. As most slaves did not have last names and often took the name of their owner, we have arranged this index alphabetically by the last name of the last known owner, then by the previous owner, and then by the name of the slave. This, in turn, has helped keep potential slave families together. When given, the age of the slave and any family relationships are noted.

We hope this list offers researchers of Washington County history and genealogy a better insight into the numerous slaves and communities that existed in the county.

PLANNED GIFTS

Making charitable gifts to the Washington County Historical Society will enable it to continue and expand its programs.

If you are making regular gifts to the Washington County Historical Society or would like to start, you may find it beneficial to set up or give:

1. A charitable lead trust that will pay income to WCHS for a set period.
2. A charitable remainder trust that will allow you to transfer property to a trust set up for WCHS without paying capital gains tax on the sale of the property.
3. Appreciated securities at their current value and take an income tax deduction for the year up to 30% of adjusted gross income.
4. Gifts from your retirement account that could be an integral part of planning for those withdrawals.
5. An irrevocable life insurance trust that could own your life insurance, when it no longer serves its purpose, to make a charitable gift that could reduce the estate's tax bill.

There are a number of ways to enhance your retirement plans while still providing for your charitable interests and making gifts you never dreamed possible. Consult with your financial advisor on other ways you can make charitable donations. These planned gifts will provide added tax benefits for you and your heirs while helping to support the vital mission of the Washington County Historical Society for years to come.
